

Creating a culture of positivity in your classroom, in your team and in your school

Thursday 7th November 2019, 9:00am – 12:00pm, Ashmount School

Imagine a classroom where the children are desperate, yes desperate, to come back for more. A place where they thrive because of the positivity and ethos that means they cannot tell the difference between the fun and the learning. This workshop links with our recently shortlisted book, The Decisive Element, Unleashing Praise and Positivity in Schools, with delegates taking away a cornucopia of ideas to fuel and sustain positivity back at school.

Who should attend?

This course is aimed at teachers – new or experienced in both Primary and Secondary Schools.

Course content

- You as THE decisive element
- Using the right type of praise.
- Creating the right culture in the classroom.
- Every child is different
- Learning styles

About the course leaders

Former teachers and school leaders, Chris Henley and Gary Toward always receive rave reviews from delegates and head teachers alike:

“Lots of practical ideas for me to implement in my classroom tomorrow.”

“Superb! Very relevant and thought provoking.”
